Magnet Programs

Center for the Arts

Our arts program allows students to express their interests in dance, instrumental music, theater, vocal music, and visual arts through "focus classes". This allows students to pick points of interest and study them in great depth through special schedule accommodation, exclusive for our program students.

Center for Journalism

The Center for Communications, Journalism and Multimedia (CJAM) develops broadcast and print journalism skills that students will be able to directly use if they choose to continue in a similar program and into the professional business world. Students will also utilize 21st century industry equipment to enhance their learning experience. They will select a "focus class" in which they will study their point of interest in great depth each day.

Center for Gifted Studies

CGS believes in educating the whole child through educational inquiry- based opportunities using gifted instructional strategies and differentiated instruction. JHMS promotes engagement and creative production by allowing students to choose an arts focus program in addition to the Advanced Academic, high school credits, elective and enrichment opportunities. Students have choice to develop their personal strengths and interests, explore the arts, and participate in extracurricular activities.
