

AP Literature and Composition Summer Reading

Students entering the AP Literature and Composition course in Fall 2016 are expected to read the following works prior to arrival on the first day of classes. These books are readily available through e-book sources, Wal-Mart, Target, new and used bookstores, Amazon.com, and local libraries.

There is an assignment on the NEHI AP Course website for How to Read Literature Like a Professor that is due the first Friday of the school year and will be followed up by an in-class student presentation assignment of a specific chapter of reading.

In addition to the reading assignment above, students should read a novel or drama of their choice from an extensive list of titles that can be found at the following website:

<http://mseffie.com/AP/APtitles.html>

NOTE: Students MUST choose a title from this list of literary works. No commercial fiction will be allowed! There will be a reading project to go along with your chosen novel/drama that I will distribute during the first week of school, so choose wisely and make sure you know your book well.

If you have an questions or concerns on summer reading assignments, please email me at campbellab@pcsb.org

HAPPY READING!

Mrs. Campbell
AP Literature and Composition
English Honors 1