

Where does the GED test come from?

The GED test was created during World War II as a way of enabling returning veterans to complete their high school studies. It has since become a nationally recognized high school equivalency test providing an important pathway to success for many adults who didn't finish school. Today, the GED test is developed and administered by the GED Testing Service.

