FSA and HRA: IRS Approved Face Masks and Other PPE

The IRS approved the purchase of personal protective equipment (PPE), such as face masks, hand sanitizer and sanitizing wipes, as qualified medical expenses if used for the primary purpose of preventing the spread of coronavirus.

They confirmed PPE expenses can be reimbursed by a health flexible spending arrangement (FSA) or a health reimbursement arrangement (HRA).

It may take stores some time to update their systems to automatically recognize it when you use your card, but if it isn't accepted on your card, you can submit a reimbursement for it. Reimbursement Form: www.pcsb.org/FSA.

Coming Soon: A New Online Explanation of Benefits (EOB) Tool

An Explanation of Benefits statement includes important information about your claims and your medical costs. But often they can be challenging to understand.

Aetna has worked to improve this with a new online tool. It will provide information on amounts billed, plan discounts, and what your final total costs are.

Here's What You'll Find:

- An interactive graph showing what your health care actually costs, how much is covered by your plan, and what you will be responsible for.
- Updates on where you are with your deductible and out-of-pocket maximum.
- Information on claims that are pending and/or impacted by secondary insurance.
